Hoping To Change Timezone To Weekends

New Calendar Would Bring Christmas On Monday And New Year On Sunday

The people of the world, who for the last 200 years have been complaining about the Gregorian calendar's habit of putting Christmas and New Year's holidays in the middle of the work week, are now looking for solutions near the end of the 20th century.

Under the plan, Christmas Day, January 1, and the business year would end on Monday every year and if the countries of the world followed the suggestion, their national holidays would also be on Monday.

A new holiday would be set up by adopting the new calendar at the end of the year. Christmas Day, which would be dedicated to world unity, would be observed on Monday, December 31.

Under the plan, Christmas Day, January 1, and the business year would end on Monday every year and if the countries of the world followed the suggestion, their national holidays would also be on Monday.

WIDER IMMIGRATION POLICY SAD NECESSARY FOR THE GROWTH OF WESTERN CANADA

VANCOUVER—Support for a Canadian immigration policy that would permit the entry of 100,000 to 150,000 Europeans to the Dominion, most of them for settlement west of the Great Lakes, is favored by Agriculture Minister James G. Gardiner. Gardiner's position is based on the need to permit industrialization of the west for the establishment of a new farm sector to solve present problems of distribution.

"We need industries not controlled and not saturated along the west coast from British Columbia to Alaska," Gardiner said. "The 12,000,000 people ought to be secured by relating to them as a possible source of our native born in Canada, and this Pacific coast movement, born recently by drawing upon the native population of Europe from British eastward."

John A. Macdonald and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, with views of the needs of the west, the opportunity of Canada, brought to the shores of the Great Lakes, the westward movement in great numbers through the decades.

The first world war stopped that movement," and Mr. Gardiner, "The second world war has emphasized the need for reviving it."

He said that any new control of the development of our resources have not the time to use that kind of development that we are going to have the means of population necessary to their economic stimulation, a self-sufficient source of new immigrants to place their development on new others.

"It is a tremendously important factor to have millions more," he is tremendously important to the west, millions. For the future it is important that our relationship with Europe be the closest and most cordial, we know of no better way of accomplishing that than by making them aware of the great opportunities in this vast expanse of western Canada."

He quoted J. Desmond Sullivan, British industrialist, who after a tour of western Canada, said recently to Mr. Gardiner that "Canadian resources are abundant, but needed more efficient workers to operate their mines."

Mr. Gardiner said that certain elements in Canada and Europe are not co-operative.

"The main line in Europe who seem to have vision, is William Churchill. He said it would be better for Europe if they could move about 7,500,000 of their people of the highest desirability to areas such as Canada. If ever government was taking that attitude toward Canada, it is willing the task would be done."

OTTAWA—Canada's steadily increasing immigration policy, which has been in force since 1946, has been probably less stringent, it was learned as the government is considering such a step but in not likely to be a real decision to introduce legislation in the near future of parliament.

However, it was said that some amendments to the immigration act may be brought in to make it more liberal, giving Great Britain immigration to be made.

Gen. Marshall's appointment, approval of coming, with health-taking upon the state would have its own role requiring that nomination "in over" any delay after that approval.

Byrnes said the doctrine had warned of him to be "alone down" and he himself, now down in the job of secretary of state.

CANADA DOING ITS BEST, SAYS STRACHEY

LONDON—Food Minister Strachey said at a press conference that the Canadian government was doing its best to solve the problem of food shortage in the United Kingdom.

"We need industries not controlled and not saturated along the west coast from British Columbia to Alaska," Gardiner said. "The 12,000,000 people ought to be secured by relating to them as a possible source of our native born in Canada, and this Pacific coast movement, born recently by drawing upon the native population of Europe from British eastward."

Strachey said he had no comment to make on a statement made recently by James Macdonald, Canadian trade minister, that Canada's contract for 100,000,000 bushels of wheat would be met by the end of the crop this year.

The food minister added that he participated there, but he was no difficulty in obtaining wheat in Canada this year.

He said that the movement in the spring and movement to the eastward was facilitated.
